ACADEMY OF SCIENCES USSR AWARDS "IMENI" PRIZES

The Academy of Sciences USSR has announced that many of the competitions for "imeni" prizes have been concluded and that some of the results are available. During 1951, a total of 43 such prizes was scheduled for awarding.

On 14 December 1951, the Presidium, Academy of Sciences USSR, announced the awarding of the Prize imeni N. D. Papaleksi to N. Ye. Alekseyevskiy, Doctor of Physicomathematical Sciences, for his work in the field of physics. The results of his research were published in his article, "Studies of the Superconductivity of Various Metal Alloys."

The Prize imeni P. L. Chebyshev for achievements in the field of mathematics was awarded to B. V. Gnedenko, Active Member, Academy of Sciences Ukrainian SSR, and Academician A. N. Kolmogorov.

For some very vital research dealing with the processing of petroleum, Ye. S. Pakrovskiy, Candidate of Chemical Sciences, was awarded the Prize imeni S. S. Nametkin. A group of geologists working under the supervision of S. F. Fedorov, Corresponding Member, Academy of Sciences USSR, in the field of extraction of valuable minerals, was awarded the Prize imeni I. M. Gubkin.

The Prize imeni A. D. Arkhangel'skiy, which is awarded for the best original work in the field of geology in European USSR, was divided between two winners: Ye. V. Shantser, Doctor of Geologicomineralogical Sciences, and A. I. Moskvitin, Doctor of Geologicomineralogical Sciences.
